

Cal Poly College of Engineering International Exchange Programs

Note: It is possible for you to study at a partner school that does not offer your major as long as the courses that are offered are relevant to your major and can apply towards your degree. For example, most engineering students may also have to take courses in ME, MATE, EE, or CSC (you can potentially take these abroad even if this is not your major). It is important to research which courses are offered in English for your major (you may not be ready to take an upper-division engineering course in German or Chinese). Here is a spreadsheet with majors offered by each partner school to help guide you. You can also request a list of courses that have previously been approved by former exchange students at the CENG Advising Center (40-115). Please note that the previously approved course list does not guarantee transfer credit, all courses taken abroad must be petitioned and approved for course credit before the course is taken.
